

BIS PhD Fellowship

Scope of the programme

The PhD Fellowship programme at the Bank for International Settlements (BIS) gives you the opportunity to acquire practical experience in supporting central banks and other financial authorities and in contributing to high-level meetings and BIS publications.

The programme aims to contribute to BIS research projects on topical issues in economics and finance, including:

- financial intermediation and regulation
- financial innovation and digitisation
- monetary policy
- fiscal policy
- international finance and international spillovers

About research at the BIS

The BIS carries out research to shed light on issues of core interest to the central bank community, to support meetings of Governors and other central bank officials, and to provide analytical backing for the activities of the various Basel-based committees.

The Monetary and Economic Department (MED) contributes to these tasks by conducting research on, among others:

- monetary and financial stability
- monetary economics
- macroeconomics and finance
- financial markets
- central bank governance

Requirements

Terms and conditions

Application procedure

Candidates must be enrolled in a PhD programme in economics, finance or related fields with an:

- Excellent knowledge of financial and monetary economics, with specialisation topics relevant to BIS research
- Experience in conducting research in relevant fields
- Ability to apply tools used in economic analysis to a range of topics

Successful candidates will be invited to MED for a period ranging from three to eleven months.

The BIS offers a competitive salary, compensation and benefits package, travel and relocation support.

Applications are open in the summer and fall at website bis.org/careers

We welcome applications from all nationalities and located anywhere in the world.

Applications are open in the summer and fall on the website:
bis.org/careers